On the whole, the interior design for this apartment turned out to be delicate and a little dreamy, yet practical at the same time. Each project reflects the energy and nature of the homeowner. As a rule, the design team received several restrictions and requests from the client, which gave an impetus to the work.

The original layout of the apartment didn't appeal very much to the designers. Therefore, they removed some elements and partition walls in order to arrange reasonable and convenient life scenarios. Having changed the layout, the design team managed to create a large walk-in wardrobe and a spacious common room with huge windows overlooking a picturesque lake.

The common room accommodates a U-shaped kitchen unit that reaches the ceiling, a built-in dishwasher, a fridge, and closets with ample storage space. The designers liked this arrangement a lot: a smart zoning solution, which is both elegant and functional. As a result, we have a common room which is a convenient space for cooking and hanging out with your family and friends. Originally, the designers were thinking of placing a TV set in this room but later turned down this idea moving it in the bedroom. Hopefully, the living room with a wonderful view and incredible sunsets encourages the dwellers to enjoy nature and company. The floor in the common room features beautiful tiles with a smooth transition from beige to mocha color with a pinch of nacre. In addition, all areas laid with tiles have underfloor heating installed to give extra comfort to the homeowners.

"This interior, however, was designed for a rental apartment, so it didn't have any particular image. That's why we decided to design a space where we would like to live ourselves."

On the left as you enter the apartment, we find the bathroom with a gloomy look than the rest of the apartment: gray colors dominate the space. Both on the walls and on the floor, we find large tiles with similar motifs, both in grey. The sink cabinet is also gray. While the finishes and accessories are in black. The mirror with attached lighting makes a difference in this space by creating a dramatic effect in the room.

In the master bedroom, a huge wall-to-wall wardrobe in was placed - this is a convenient place for storing clothes and bedding. Some space near the window is left unoccupied: one can do yoga or practice meditation here. If this apartment is rented by a family with a small child, they can put a baby cot here; or a dressing table if the lady who is going to live here is a makeup fan. Here, the bedroom floor is clad with three-layer parquet boards to create a cosy atmosphere.
